

THE NEW PLAN IS APPROVED

Plans To Issue Hundred And Fifty Millions
Bonds And Notes By Federal Government At Once.

IS TO RELIEVE THE STRINGENCY

How The Bonds May Be Obtained--Will Bring Forth
Millions Hoarded In Vaults And Homes--
For Immediate Use.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Nov. 18.—The bankers, capitalists and financiers here generally approve of the action of Secretary Cortelyou in issuing fifty million dollars of Panama bonds and a hundred million dollars certificates of indebtedness for the relief of the financial stringency.

The issue, it was the general opinion, is found to have beneficial results. The issue of temporary receipts, as was expected, will immediately relieve the currency scarcity and banish premium on cash.

Rates Drop.
London, Nov. 18.—The official announcement from Washington of the issuing of treasury certificates and Panama bonds caused prices to move upward immediately today. It is believed the action will stop the drain of gold from this market.

In New York.
New York, Nov. 18.—Dealings began in the stock market with activity at a boiling point and a very buoyant tone as effect of the relief measures determined upon by the government. The gains ranged from a fraction to four points.

There was a shrinkage in the demand after the opening rush and prices receded.

First Half Million.
St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 18.—Former Governor Francis was the first subscriber for the treasury certificates at the St. Louis subscription. He subscribed for half a million dollars.

Are Confident.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The treasury officials and others conversant on the financial conditions are almost a unit in the opinion that Cortelyou's announcement of an issue of a hundred million dollars in treasury certificates and fifty million of Panama bonds is the complete solution of the present money problem.

New Bonds Can Be Bought.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The treasury circular inviting proposals for Panama canal bonds reads as follows:

"Treasury Department, Office of the Secretary, Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The secretary of the treasury offers to the public $50,000,000 of the bonds of the Panama canal loan authorized by section 8 of the act approved June 28, 1902, and supplemented by section 1 of the act of Dec. 21, 1905, both acts are quoted below.

"The bonds will bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent per annum, will be dated Aug. 1, 1906, and the interest will be paid quarterly on the first days of November, February, May, and August.

"They will be issued in denominations of $20, $100, and $1,000 of coupon bonds, and of $20, $100, $1,000 and $10,000 of registered bonds. They will be redeemable in United States gold coin at the pleasure of the United States, after ten years from the date of their issue, and will be payable thirty years from such date.

"They will be exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under state, municipal, or local authority.

"They will be available to national banks as security for circulating notes upon the same terms as the 2 per cent consols of 1900—to wit: The semi-annual tax upon circulating notes based upon the said bonds as security will be one-fourth of 1 per centum. They will be receivable, like all other United States bonds, as security for public deposits in national banks.

"The law forbids their sale at less than par and provides that all citizens of the United States shall have equal opportunity to subscribe therefor.

Bidding Ends on Nov. 30.
"In pursuance of the above announcement the secretary invites bids for the bonds heretofore described, which must be submitted to this department on or before the 30th of November, 1907.

"Each bid should state the amount of bonds desired by the subscriber, whether coupon or registered, the price he is willing to pay, and the place where he desires to make payment—whether at the treasury of the United States or at the office of some one of the assistant treasurers at New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, New Orleans, or San Francisco.

"All bids should be addressed to the secretary of the treasury, division of loans and currency, and the envelopes enclosing them should be plainly marked 'Bids for Panama Canal Bonds.'

"Upon receipt and classification of the bids hereby invited the successful bidders will be advised of the acceptance of their bids, and they will be instructed as to the date upon which payment is desired to be made at the treasury or some sub-treasury of the United States.

Small Bids Get Priority.
"In considering bids, the bidders offering the highest prices will receive the first allotment. Of two or more bidders offering the same price, those asking for the smaller amounts of bonds will receive priority in allotment. The department also reserves the right to permit bidders offering the highest prices to increase the amount of their purchases.

"For the sake of uniformity the bonds will be dated Aug. 1, 1906, which is the date of the outstanding Panama canal bonds, but interest on the bonds of this issue will begin Nov. 1, 1907, and bidders will be required to pay accrued interest on their bonds from that date to the date of payment.

"The department also reserves the right to reject any or all bids, if deemed to be to the interests of the United States so to do. The bonds will be ready for delivery upon receipt of payment therefor.

"Prospective bidders desiring information not contained in this circular may address the secretary of the treasury, division of loans and currency, Washington, D. C., the assistant treasurers at Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, or San Francisco.

"GEORGE B. CORTELYOU,"
"Secretary."

To Say Nothing in His Lafayette, Indiana, Speech Relative to His Candidacy.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

RIVAL CLAIMS FOR GAMBLER'S FORTUNE
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 18.—The anticipated battle for the immense fortune left by Mike McDonald, the former gambling king and political boss of this city, was begun today when a hearing was had on an application for an injunction preventing the estate from paying Mrs. McDonald, the widow, her dower right in the estate pending a settlement. The application was made by Mrs. Mary McDonald, a former wife of the noted gambler. In her application she declares herself the rightful wife of McDonald, and alleges that she was the victim of a fraudulent divorce, denying that she fled to France with a priest, which was the ground upon which McDonald obtained his divorce from her. Not the least interesting phase of the case is the fact that Mrs. Dora McDonald, the defendant in the injunction proceedings, is soon to be placed on trial for the alleged murder of Webster Guerlin, an artist, with whom she is said to have been infatuated.

IN THE ELEVATOR CRASH AT CANTON
J. P. Devereaux, Well-Known Here and a Cousin of Dr. Devereaux, Lives, Though Reported Dead.
J. P. Devereaux of Buffalo, N. Y., a cousin of Dr. C. C. Devereaux of this city and a traveling salesman for a large New York furniture concern who has been in the habit of "making" Janesville twice a year, was one of the passengers terribly injured in the elevator accident which occurred in the McKinley building at Canton, Ohio, last week. One limb was fractured at the hip and he sustained internal injuries from which he may never recover. The first reports had it that he was killed. The mechanism of the lift got out of order after it had stopped at the third floor to let off a passenger and the cage shot like lightning to the roof, broke its cables by the impact, and fell through the several stories to crash into the pit.

CHIEF SHIPPY

To be chief of police over the city of Chicago is to more than meet the desire of Alexander for more worlds to conquer. The chief of police of Chicago is about the busiest man on the face of the earth, for Chicago is naughty and glad of it. Shippy, however, is an enemy which the criminal world has come to fear. He has reached his present exalted position through a long series of promotions. He is a police officer of irreproachable integrity and dauntless purpose. Just at present he is engaged in the gigantic task of cleaning up Chicago, which is a job on a level with the cleaning of the American shubler. Shippy has made his instructions perfectly plain. One Chicago paper epitomizes them as follows:

"Commanding officers will be held responsible to me for the nets of every pickpocket, confidence man, burglar, parolee prisoner or gambler in their districts.

"They will be expected to have a help him."

CHIEF SHIPPY

carefully revised list of every crook in their districts, with the address, general habits and the names of officers who know them by sight.

"Inspectors and captains will be required to be in a position to report just what every crook is doing at any time. The French police system, modified to suit local conditions, is to be employed.

"Vagrancy proceedings are to be started against every crook, regardless of his political, social or financial position.

"Charges before the civil service commission will be filed against police officers who do not carry out these instructions."

It will interest the public at large to know that Chief Shippy himself adds to these instructions a characteristic statement as follows:

"The bigger the crook and the more political influence he has the more I desire to go after him. No amount of political pull or drag will help him."

Roussers.—Paul Meeker, of the town of La Prairie, has shown us some samples of sweet turnips that are the largest specimens of the kind that we have ever seen. Some of the larger ones weighed 15 pounds—enough for what the soldier used to call "a square meal" for a large family.

The Capt. has been kept on the scent of these prowling rascals this being the third stolen horse he has recovered in a month, besides returning to their owners the harness of Mr. Comstock and the wagon of Nettleson, Jacks, & Company stolen from them recently.

Decidedly Mean.—It is reported that some of the Main street dry goods princes have been employing women to buy prints from Gode's at 10 cents a yard and then selling them at a shilling a yard. Four Political Parties Still Quarrelling and Any Decision by Gov. Magoon Will Cause Dissatisfaction.

LEADERS AT VARIANCE

Washington, Nov. 18.—Coincident with the receipt of news from Havana of the completion of the Cuban census has arisen a demand from many sources that a time be fixed at once for the holding of municipal and national elections in the island.

Officials of the war and state departments, who have had much to do with formulating answers to questions concerning Cuba since the provisional government was established and American troops were stationed there, agree that the problem is not solved by the termination of the census enumeration, and the tabulation of the returns to form electoral registration lists.

The provisional governor is greatly disturbed over the recommendation he must make concerning the time of holding the elections, and it appears he cannot expect aid from the various political parties, inasmuch as the leaders hold as widely varying views as to the time the census was ordered.

Census Excuse for Delay.

The taking of the census in Cuba by American methods is recognized on every side as a great and needed work, but in the present instance there is no disguising the fact that it was used as a means of legitimately delaying the time when the United States again must surrender the reins of government to the Cubans. It was hoped that by the time the enumeration had been completed, an agreement could be reached by the political leaders as to the time of holding the elections and that the United States would be spared the necessity of incuring the enmity of any of the parties. It had been hoped, too, that time would have healed much of the arousness engendered by the revolution against the Palma government, and that all parties would become imbued with a desire to hold a peaceable and fair election.

While these hopes have not been fulfilled, it is true that the United States now occupies a more favorable position in the matter than it did a year ago.

At the present time, there are four political parties in Cuba. Two of these are factions of the Liberal party and are about of equal strength, though the faction headed by Jose Miguel Gomez claims to control the political situation and is demanding that the municipal and national elections be held simultaneously, not later than February next.

Cannot Avoid Dissatisfaction.

From reports received by Washington officials, it appears that there will be dissatisfaction with the result of the election, whatever it is. The only thing hoped for is that a majority of the best classes of Cubans will see that the United States is doing its best to insure a fair election in order to live up to the promise made by President Roosevelt that American troops shall be withdrawn at the earliest practical moment and the government affairs restored to the Cubans.

GOOD FOR THE COUNTY BOARD

The county board of supervisors is to be congratulated for the interest manifested in the good roads movement, and for intelligent action taken.

The election of Mr. Skavlem to the new office of county road commissioner is the first step in the right direction. No better man could have been found for the work. Mr. Skavlem combines with ability, an ambition to solve many problems which confront intelligent road-builders. He is a student of geology and his knowledge of rocks and other material used in road construction will prove a valuable aid in the work.

The most hopeful thing about the whole situation is, that the county is coming to believe that road-building is an art, and that it pays to do it right.

Of course it takes money, but it is money well spent, and while a modern road may cost from $2,000 to $4,000 a mile, the investment is good for half a century, and distributed over that length of time, the cost is less by far than the old system.

Suppose the county was bonded for a million dollars and the money used to build 500 miles of good roads during the next five years, what would be the result?

If the bonds were 30- or 40-year bonds, they would be paid with no perceptible difference in taxes, and the value of farm property would increase so substantially that before the work was completed, the people would be clamoring for another million, to make every road in the county a boulevard.

This may seem like a pipe dream, but it isn't. Counties in other states have adopted this policy, and results are most satisfactory. Rock county has an assessed valuation of more than $50,000,000, nearly half of the amount is assessed to the cities, and the burden of paying a bonded debt would be evenly distributed.

Good roads are primarily in the interests of the farmer. They contribute to his wealth and comfort, but they also help the cities in various ways. They stimulate the home market and aid to the volume of business. There is every reason why the expense of building should be shared mutually.

This can best be done through a bond issue, and just now there is money enough in the stockings of the county to float the investment at home, and restore to circulation money needed in the channels of business.

MAIL ORDER COMPETITION

How to successfully meet mail order competition and hold trade, is the problem with which retail merchants are struggling, in all parts of the country.

Organizations have been formed, resolutions adopted, boycotts recommended, and all sorts of erratic efforts put forth to stem the tide, but to no avail.

The merchants of Iowa decided recently that the only way to meet this kind of competition was to meet it, and so they inaugurated a campaign of publicity using newspapers rather than catalogues, and quoting prices freely.

One of these merchants, H. Leslie Willey, located at the little town of Strattinger, Iowa, had occasion to write a letter to the publishers of "Printers' Ink" not long ago, in which he said:

"I am enclosing you copy of my half page ad offering to meet mail-order prices. In the past week I have sold a dozen mail-order buyers articles that are listed in catalogues—articles like the Maydole hammer and Dilation saw—at a lower price here than the catalogue quote in Chicago."

The Iowa men are on the right track. There is no sentiment in business, and your best friend buys goods where he thinks he can buy the cheapest, with no regard for friendship.

What Mr. Willey is doing with his little stock, and from his little town, can be duplicated by merchants everywhere. Keep the catalogues open in the office, quote reasonable goods in season, quality for quality, and no trouble will be found in convincing the local trade that the home market is the place to buy goods.

A Janesville harnesman bought a mail-order harness and hung it up near the door. One was all he needed; for any one could distinguish the difference between a good article and an inferior, when compared, side by side.

The cheap harness hung by the door for months, while dozens of sets of his own make went out at a profit.

Put a mail-order stove on the floor and let the customer see the difference between the genuine and imitation, and there will be no trouble in meeting this kind of competition.

This same argument applies to all lines of goods. The success of catalogue houses is not due to bargains, but to publicity. When the merchants fully appreciate this fact, and adopt the same policy there will be less complaint and more business.

CLEARING HOUSE CHECKS

The Chicago clearing house checks are the most popular form of new money which has yet been issued, and they are in such lively demand, not only in the city but throughout the middle west, that orders can not be filled with any degree of promptness.

These checks have several advantages over local checks. They are neatly lithographed on bank paper and have the appearance of money. They are good anywhere, and will buy railroad tickets or anything else that currency will buy both in and out of Chicago.

They are absolutely safe, because the banks, to whom they are issued, deposit with the clearing house committee $1.33 in gilt-edge securities for every dollar issued.

Janesville bankers have orders in for this kind of money and when the orders are filled, the cashier's checks will gradually disappear to be replaced by Chicago clearing house checks. This is a move in the right direction, and should result in putting in circulation a lot of currency which is now being hoarded.

A Chicago clearing house check is just as good as a Chicago draft. It will pay bills either at home or abroad. It is the best circulating medium yet devised to meet the currency stringency.

There is a Philadelphia man who claims to have found the Philosopher's Stone sought through ages and says he can convert silver and zinc into gold. That is easy enough if you have enough of either metal to sell. Gold can be obtained or its equivalent in any civilized community.

Another fatality, in which a youth lost his life, shocked the community on Saturday last. Boys and trains of cars have a fascination and take the two together it is a dangerous pastime to be indulged in.

Milwaukee is entertaining the big colored fighting machine Johnson. Johnson is one of the big boys in the game and Milwaukee is worshipping at the Pugs' shrine this winter.

The Bradley trial is creating more than sympathy for the woman who shot the man who had wronged her for years and then was about to desert her for another woman.

There is still some doubt as to the football championship of the west. However, if the Ping Pong championship is in doubt Wisconsin can claim that.

The football season is waning. Already the sporting editors are dusting off their light dope books to prepare for the winter's campaign.

One hundred and fifty million dollars' worth of government bonds ought to do something towards relieving the strenuous times.

The Shaw trial is soon to be the fore front in New York again and society can again become interested in the awful disclosures.

Janesville is quite sporty. It has a prize-fighting association, while the state of Indiana has driven the pugs from its borders.

Janesville factory workers are lots better off than in some cities where the factories are being shut down and forced reduced.

Farm products still show a decidedly healthy tone and prices are such that it pays to be a tiller of the soil.

This warm weather is just a gift of nature that will soon be gone.

Country 'Merchant' Hopes So. Chicago Examiner: In spite of the magnificent sport he is making, many entertain grave fears that Postmaster General Meyer will be left at the parcels post.

Why? Machine Journal: President Van Hise favors segregation of the sexes. If carried out it means in the university separate classes for the young men and women.

Booty He Cannot Enjoy. Exchange: At any rate, the discerning who stole the famous Garfield tin from the Pennsylvania railroad station in Washington will have to enjoy his historic possession in silence.

Gov. Johnson, Also. Fond du Lac Commonwealth: It is really unkind for those North Dakota democrats to take their vote on presidential candidates, and show a preference for Gov. Johnson, just at a time when Col. Bryan is touring the northwest.

That's Provincialism. Sheboygan Journal: President Roosevelt is going to recommend that white paper for newspaper making be admitted free. What is needed in Sheboygan is a protective tariff laid on Chicago and Milwaukee newspapers.

He is the Reason. Oshkosh Northwestern: Whatever the reason may be everyone will have to admit that the brood of neoplatonists in this country are not so arrogant and insolent as they were before Mr. Roosevelt took his place at the head of the government.

Which is the Why and Wherefore. Chicago Examiner: A dispatch from Washington says improper pictures cards are being carefully watched by the Postoffice Department. Cauder compels the remark that they are as being scrutinized by a certain percent of the unofficial population.

Warships of Success. Milwaukee Sentinel: The prompt nomination of Tom L. Johnson for president by the St. Louis Democratic club, long an enthusiastic supporter of William J. Bryan, reiterates the old truth that nothing succeeds like success, especially among democrats.

Free Advertising His Compensation. Green Bay Gazette: The professor who is subsisting on a diet of peanuts has now challenged Mayor Becker to a debate on the sustaining qualities of eggs. Why don't that peanut professor confine himself to dishing instead of issuing bulletins and doling at intervals of a few hours?

A Squirrelly Yarn. New London Press: Peter Barthele of Shawano on his farm in the town of Vescott shot a squirrel which had run over a $10 bill in its mouth. Peter killed the squirrel and found in a hole several more $10 and $20 bills. It is commonly believed that this money is part of the amount lost a few weeks ago by Mr. H. Vengas, when hunting. But since the latter, of course, can not prove his ownership, Peter will retain the money, amounting in all to $80. It was the most successful squirrel hunt in the county.

Equity of Equity Society Questioned. United States Tobacco Journal: Our readers have been made familiar with the purpose and aim of what is called "The Society of Equity," but which would qualify itself more correctly as "The Society of Iniquity." For it is nothing more nor less than a Tobacco Pooling Trust. By hook and crook this "Trust" has compelled the farmers in the dark tobacco belt of Kentucky to pool their 1907 crop in order to force up its price. And now it has succeeded in unloading its pooled tobacco at the forced-up price—as the news said: the price is the highest ever paid with the exception of the war price—on the British Tobacco Trust, the Imperial Co. If the facts are as reported then there has certainly been a violation of Section 8 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in this transaction. Will then Attorney General Bonaparte order the confiscation of the tobacco of the Tobacco Pooling Trust when it is in transit to be shipped to England to the British Tobacco Trust? Or does it make a difference to our Attorney-General whose ox is being gored?

Eggs vs. Peanuts. Milwaukee News: It appears from an Aurora, Ill., dispatch that "Dr. T. J. Allen has challenged Mayor Becker of Milwaukee to a formal debate as to the relative food values of the peanut and the egg." The debate is to be held in the Aurora coliseum on Tuesday night. The challenge grew out of a statement credited to Mayor Becker that he had started on a two-weeks' diet of eggs and that he would speak on his fare at Dr. Allen's coming meeting. Dr. Allen is now on the twenty-first day of his sixty days' diet and is feeling well. The fighting Japanese live upon fish and vegetables. There are millions of Japanese that never have tasted flesh food.

Robert M. La Follette, the fiery fighter, is a vegetarian. Is there a meat eater in the senate that could talk longer than La Follette? Surely the bear-eating Roosevelt is not in the same class with La Follette, who can make a meal on peanuts.

And now we have Shurtle Becker, the "day wonder" of Milwaukee, to show that it is not necessary to eat meat to be a great man. It was not meat that Caesar fed upon that made him great.

If Dr. Allen of Aurora were a meat eater, the contest to which he has challenged Mayor Becker, the egg eater, could have but one ending—eggs would win.

Important Uses of Hell-Fire. Chicago Inter Ocean: Looking objectively at the work to be done and considering what means are best calculated to obtain results. The Inter Ocean marvels to observe that many ministers seem to have laid aside half the weapons in their spiritual armory, and yet are surprised that they do not reach the desired ends.

How long would a political party last which had no penalties for desertion or opposition, and which viewed fidelity and zeal as of little more merit in the distribution of rewards than lip service and idleness?

How could an army win victories which, while offering distinction for courage, threatened no punishment for cowardice, and viewed with an equal kindness the soldier who fights and the soldier who runs away, the sentry who gives the alarm and repels the enemy and the sentry who sleeps at his post or betrays it to the enemy?

How could the state endure which both forgot and forgave treason, and in the final account put the rebel on a plane of equality with the loyal citizen, simply because both are men?

Then how can the church militant do its work successfully as a human institution with the argument of "love" alone, and by hiding always the existence of divine punishment?

Men are not kept from crime merely by urgency that it is "nicer" to refrain from it and that more people will "love" them. The prospect of the penalty must also be presented. Nor are men kept from sin when the church hides to them no fear of punishment for sin and speaks only of rewards for righteousness.

MRS. MARY SULLIVAN DIED AT DAWN TODAY

Was Stricken With Pneumonia Two Weeks Ago But Was Believed to Be Recovering Until Yesterday.

Mrs. Mary "Ellen" Sullivan, a resident of Janesville for over half a century and a woman revered and loved by all who knew her, died suddenly at her home, 73 South Washington street, at half past four o'clock this morning. She was stricken with pneumonia two weeks ago but her recovery was confidently expected until yesterday, when there was a decided change for the worse in her condition. She deceased was born at Quincy, Ill., on October 11, 1844, and with the exception of two years spent in Minnesota had lived in Janesville continuously since 1850. Her husband, Timothy Sullivan, died sixteen years ago. Of the thirteen children, nine survive. They are: James H. Sullivan of Stevens Point, Wis.; John E. and G. G. Sullivan of Chicago, George T. of Long Beach, California, Frank T., Edward M., and William A., and the Misses Annie J. and Nellie F. Sullivan, all of Janesville. There are also two brothers—George B. Little of Milwaukee and John E. Little of Washington, D. C. The funeral services are to be held at St. Mary's Catholic church at nine o'clock Wednesday morning, and the burial will take place at Mt. Olivet cemetery. All of the children with the exception of George Sullivan, have sent word that they will be here for the services.

Marjorie Payne. The remains of Miss Marjorie Payne of Geneva were brought here Sunday for embalming from Beloit, where she died yesterday morning.

ENRIQUE C. CREEL.

Mexico City, Mexico, Nov. 18.—At the state department it is announced that Enrique C. Creel may soon retire as ambassador to the United States from Mexico. The exact date of Ambassador Creel's resignation, or the name of his successor is not made public. It is said that Mr. Creel will remain in Mexico until after the session of the Central American peace conference at Washington, D. C. As soon as the conference adjourns the ambassador will go to Washington and remain there a short time before his return to the service. He will then return to the state of Chihuahua, of which he was recently elected governor.

John Klemer. On Nov. 12 by reason of the alleged want of repair of the westerly side of South Pearl street (formerly known as Gold street) where the same intersects Gold street, it is claimed that the grade of Pearl street was lowered two feet in that locality without any corresponding change in Holmes street and that the rig was overturned by reason of such "fault."

Pumpkins vs. Banks. A bit of town body who had become possessed of a large sum of money, and who was afraid of banks, hid her money in a pumpkin and hid the pumpkin in the hay. An enterprising burglar who was on the watch got the money and the savings of almost a life-time was gone merely because of mistaken notion of the safety of banks. If it had been intended that pumpkins should be deposited for money they would no doubt have been made of tool-proof steel and with automatic locks. And she deposited the money in the bank it would have been a benefit to the community, the bank and the lady. There is a moral. Guess it.

His Great Idea. Gilbert, the small son of a minister, was one day trying to construct a church with his building blocks, but found he hadn't enough blocks. "Say, papa," he inquired gravely, "can't you hold up your congregation for funds to finish my church?"

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

A Laugh in Church

She sat on the sliding cushion,
The dear, wee woman of four;
Her feet, in their shiny slippers,
Hung dangling over the floor.
She meant to be good; she had promised,
And so, with her big, brown eyes,
She stared at the meeklinghouse windows
And counted the crawling flies.

She looked far up at the preacher,
But she thought of the honeybees
Droning away at the blossoms.
That whitened the cherry trees.
She thought of a broken basket,
Where curled in a dusky heap,
Four sleek, round puppies, with fringy ears.

Lay snuggled and fast asleep,
Such soft, warm bodies to cuddle,
Such queer little hearts to beat,
Such swift, round tongues to kiss,
Such sprawling, cushiony feet;
She could feel in her clasping fingers
The touch of the antsy skin,
And a cold, wet nose exploring
The dimples under her chin.

Then a sudden ripple of laughter
Ran over the parted lips
So quick that she could not catch it
With her rosy fingertips.
The people whispered, "Hush the child!"
As each one winked from a nap,
But the dear, wee woman hid her face
For shame in her mother's lap.

By delivering these things:

"Dr. Richards, you did that very nicely and satisfactorily to me."
3RD. GOOD, HONEST WORK.
Time tells the tale in all things and time only shows up the durability of his work.

3RDLY. REASONABLE PRICES.

BADLY BITTEN BY A MADMAN

UNDER-SHERIFF GEORGE APPLEBY HAD EXCITING ENCOUNTER AT EDGERTON.

SATURDAY EVENING LAST

Saturday was a busy and eventful day for the county jail officials. Under-sheriff George M. Appleby caught a Tartar at Edgerton last evening. The person of a one-armed man about 25 years of age, named Frank Lang, who had been pronounced insane but who was heretofore harmless and anxious to go to the Mendota asylum. With the assistance of City Marshal Philip Welch and nearly all of the train crew the patient was finally bundled into an express car, but there the real struggle had only just commenced, as the Janesville official soon learned to his sorrow. For, as the latter made an attempt to adjust the straps, Lang set his teeth in the muscles of the under-sheriff's left forearm, biting through the sleeve of a coat, sweater, and two shirts, and badly lacerating the flesh before he could be forced to let go of his half-dog hold.

He was finally overpowered and bound down but he did not cease to struggle until he had reached his destination. The train crew bound up the wound as best they could and when he had turned the man over to the hospital authorities. Under-sheriff Appleby had the wound cleaned and antiseptized. Although the injury was a very painful one, no serious consequences of a permanent character are anticipated.

Branded Hatchet

Martin Hugemann, a young Norwegian of weak mentality who ran away from the poorhouse some time ago, created considerable excitement on the Honey Trip farm north of Afton Saturday by brandishing a hatchet and threatening the dwellers there. Deputy Sheriff Fred Gilman of Evansville captured the man, two miles west of the farm and brought him back to the asylum.

Taken to Waupun.
Frank Rucker of Magnolia, who was convicted of a statutory offense against his fourteen-year-old step-daughter and sentenced to spend three years in state's prison, was taken to Waupun Saturday by Sheriff I. U. Fisher.

Crazed by Drink.
William Nash, who was sent to the county jail last week to serve a term for drunkenness and who had a fit in the courtroom, has been acting like a man of disordered mind ever since. He spends part of his time hiding from Officer Champion, who, he thinks, is his traitor and the butler in describing the pictures conjured up by a perverted imagination.

Drafahl and Hauer pleaded guilty and received 10 years in their confinement as the punishment of the hold-up. WAS RELIEVED OF $115 IN BELOIT

I. W. Wheeler of Clinton, Plaintiff in Damage Action Now on Trial Here, Encountered Pickpocket Saturday.

I. W. Wheeler of Clinton, plaintiff in a damage action now on trial in circuit court against John P. Miller to recover for injuries sustained in a collision of vehicles last summer, was robbed of a pocketbook containing cash, cashier's certificates, and a certificate of deposit, amounting in all to $115, at Beloit Saturday afternoon. While Mr. Wheeler was waiting for a car at the Lino City Interurban station he took the pocketbook from his trousers' pocket and exhibited one of the cashier's certificates to a stranger, remarking that he doubted whether the traction company would accept such currency for tickets. The stranger, who was very much interested and reached for the certificate. After examining it, he handed it back and Mr. Wheeler replaced it in the pocketbook. There was a small crush of passengers boarding the car and Mr. Wheeler distinctly recalled this circumstance as well as the confab with the stranger when he found his luck pocket empty some hours thereafter. The certificate of deposit was for $25 and there was about $45 in money and $65 in cashier's certificates.

Geo. E. King Makes Timely Discovery of Fire in People's Drugstore.

The blaze originated in a small room in the rear of the drugstore where pads and oils are stored and before it was put out three overcoats and other clothing were burned up and considerable damage done to the block. The fire is thought to have been caused by a lighted cigar stub that was accidentally dropped into the overcoat pocket of a clerk who had just come from the high school football game.

DR. DWIGHT BAGS A BIG BUCK DEER

He Declares That Signs of Deer Exist in Woods But Game Is Hard to Get a Shot at.

Dr. C. G. Dwight returned to Janesville this noon with a buck deer which he shot while on a three days' hunt in Price county in the northern part of the state, it being the first deer to be brought to this city this far so far as is known. He declares that hunting was very difficult because of the snow in the woods caused by the lack of a heavy fall of snow and dryness. What little snow that covers the ground has a stiff crust on top which causes considerable noise when broken. The doctor declares that many signs of deer exist in the woods but the game is wild and hard to get close to.

WHITE HOUSE GROUNDS GUARDED BY MAD BULLS

WASHINGTON.—In the absence of President Roosevelt in the cane-brake and with "Pete" the bull dog sequestered on Surgeon-General Hixey's farm, the white house grounds have not been left unguarded. A couple of bulls—not bull dogs, but real bovine bulls—have taken upon themselves the task, formerly so well discharged by "Pete" of seeing that the grounds are unprofaned by undesirable citizens, mollicoddles or milk-sops.

Since the president and Pete went away newspaper men, mollicoddles and the criminal rich have roamed the white house grounds with impunity. Undesirable citizens have shown a tendency to stand on the walks and bark at the white house, and neither "Slippers," the six-toed cat, nor Quentin Roosevelt's snakes have proved equal to the task of preserving the requisite calm.

How the two patriotic bulls discovered the state of things and decided that it was up to them to rectify it will never be known. It is a fact, however, that early the other morning they took up a position in front of the white house from which they could command both walks. The first trespasser to appear was an Afro-American named Charles Lancaster. It was still dark when he arrived, and the bull at the west corner let him get a little distance by before he made up his mind as to Lancaster's undesirability. Then he discharged a bolt down and advanced on the enemy, head down and tail up.

Lancaster moved onward with some haste, and the bull did likewise. At the east corner the west bull's colleague came charging out with a few savage remarks.

Lancaster emerged from the east gate about as conservatively as a shot departs from a gun, and the two bulls fortunately got jammed in the doorway. The Afro-American never stopped till he got to the house of detention. Meanwhile, the two bulls, finding the mollicoddle crop a little short, tired of the job and wandered to Iowa Circle, where they were later arrested by a policeman and locked up.

Comparative Scores Fall Absolutely as Guide to Critics.

TWO VERY STRONG PLAYERS.

Football Strategy Compared to Methods of Experts Who Devise Engines of Actual Warfare—Field Goals Increase in Number.

The results of football games this season have practically ended forever the practice of attempting to forecast the outcome of contests, according to comparative scores. It has always been difficult in football to figure the strength of teams on a comparative score basis, but not within the knowledge of experts.

Lancaster moved onward with some haste, and the bull did likewise. At the east corner the west bull's colleague came charging out with a few savage remarks.

Present Plans Mark Many Men For the Slaughter.

A transformation is taking place in the makeup of the Cleveland American league team for 1908, according to reliable information. The scheme of reorganization, it is said, calls for the following changes:

Under present plans of the management half the pitching staff and half the infield will be replaced by new men. There will be a new outfielder and probably a new catcher.

The pitchers upon whom Lajoie will rely next season are Joss, Liebhaf, Thelma and Berger. Bernhard and Hess, upon whom wagers were made some time ago, will figure in deals, as will also Clarkson, who has failed to come up to expectations.

Rhodes may or may not be on the Cleveland payroll next season. It will depend largely on the showing made by the youngsters whom Larry will look over in the spring.

If there seem to be two or three men capable of winning half their games in fast company, "Dusty," who is none too well satisfied with his berth there, may be traded. If, however, not more than one of the youngsters seems worth carrying, Rhodes will remain on the staff.

Great hopes are placed on the two southpaws the Naps will try out next season, Lattimer and Granger.

As to the infield, Bill Bradley and George Stovall are to be replaced, the former by George Perring and the latter by Lister, Daubert or Bill Lynch. When Bradley's hitting fell off in the spring of 1906 everybody thought it was only a temporary slump. When Bradley's arm was broken along in August he had just begun to rap the ball hard again, and then there seemed no doubt he had taken a slump. But this spring Bradley again failed to hit. He has failed all summer. If he is still in a slump, it is one of the longest on record. His hitting, too, has deteriorated this year. Perring's great hitting and good fielding had much to do with keeping Toledo in first place during a large part of the American association season. He made a showing that was never expected of him by the Cleveland owners when they let him go, and he will now have the opportunity that would have been his this season had Somers, Kilfoyle and Lajoie had any idea that he was going to do so well and Bradley so poorly.

The intention to replace Stovall is due to two reasons—first, Stovall's slump, and second, his failure to hold up to his past performances.

Harry Day is slated to go solely because his legs are in such shape that he is liable to be put out of the game for weeks by the least wrench, as he was both this season and last.

Benjie and Clarke will again be Cleveland's standbys behind the bat. If a good catcher can be picked up in a trade Waddell will be swapped or sold; otherwise he will stick to his arduous job.

Football and Theology.

Protest having been made that the game of football is not a proper sport for students of the theological school to indulge in, one of the members of the Princeton Theological seminary team has prepared a formidable list of quotations to prove that the game is referred to in the Bible, and, in fact, very excellent advice as to playing the game is found in the Old Testament.

For instance, the time to root at a critical moment is found in Isaiah xlii, 4, "Pass ye over to Tarsish; howl, ye inhabitants of the isle."

Again, in Isaiah xlii, 18, there is this comment on the brutality of the game, "He will surely violently turn and toss thee like a ball into a large country; there thou shalt die."

Praise for a good play is found in Galatians v, 7, "Ye did run well."

The fate of the man who stumbles while making an end play is summed up in Psalm xxxviii, 16, "When my foot slippeth they magnify themselves against me."

That in the old days it was the practice to have the center do the punting is shown in Deuteronomy xxxii, 15, "Joshurun waxed fat and kicked." The value of knowledge, the material on the other side is brought out in Psalm lxxiii, 17, "Then understood I their end."

PLEDGE TO WIFE KEEPS TEDDY FROM THIRD TERM

It is determined to shield Ethel from the publicity that came to Alice Roosevelt and she would prefer that the former girl wait until the family should be established in private life. Still she realizes what it is for a young girl to make her social bow in the white house, and for that reason she, will grant to Ethel just three months as a social grown-up.

Mrs. Roosevelt from the first hour of the president's incumbency has been solicitous about its effect on her children. Often she has pleaded with persons not to spoil the children and has exerted all her influence to keep all their doings out of print.

It is likely Miss Roosevelt will spend the two years after she leaves Washington in traveling abroad and studying music and languages. She will not be 18 until the summer of 1909.

It is said that Mrs. Roosevelt reluctantly consented to introduce her young daughter Ethel to Washington society, probably in Christmas week of 1908.

ACT OF "DRYS" MAY EMBARRASS ROOSEVELT

If congress at the coming session prohibits the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, as now seems probable, President Roosevelt will be in an embarrassing position—the prohibitionists say "between the devil and the deep sea."

For tactical reasons the prohibitionists will tack their bill to an appropriation measure so as to assure its passage. When such an appropriation bill comes before the president he will have to decide, first, whether he can afford to jeopardize the interests of the branch of the government for which the appropriation is proposed, by vetoing the liquor bill in order to get rid of the "liquor devil" clause.

If he decides he cannot afford to interpose a veto he will have to decide whether he shall obey it and turnish no wine to guests at the White House. There is no power on earth that can compel the president to observe any law.

As all writs in the District of Columbia run in his name, it is obvious that he would not arrest himself for disregarding the law. That he had disregarded it would be notice to all peace officers that he decided not to enforce it against himself.

All presidents of the United States have at times set wine before their guests. Until Theodore Roosevelt became president the White House had a wine cellar and a dark room in the attic set aside as a storeroom for liquors.

He did away with them both. The cellar is now used for machinery and the dark room is a part of the quarters for the servants.

edge of the oldest inhabitant has a year been marked by no more startling reversals as the present one.

According to some of the scores this year, a team that has been beaten by a second rate eleven is just as apt as not to turn around and wallop an unbeaten team that the critics have deemed as the greatest gridiron machine in all history.

Presumably there is only one way to be sure of betting on the winning team nowadays, and that is to bet on the eleven that will make the highest score.

And probably some one is now working on a craft that will destroy the submarines that destroy the torpedo boat destroyers that destroy the torpedo boats that destroy the big battleships.

In football various teams perfected the forward pass. Then Princeton devised a scheme that destroyed the effectiveness of the forward pass, as evidenced by the Carillo Indian game. Then Yale perfected a system of play to beat the scheme Princeton had for CHAPTER XV.

She leaned comfortably against the foot of the bed. Evidently she saw no objection to a midnight chat with him. She seemed to him in her innocent acceptance of the situation as ignorant of evil as an angel.

There seemed so much that he wanted to ask her that he hardly knew where to begin. But with a trifle less than her usual timidity before him she took the initiative.

"You were in this room when I came in, weren't you?" she asked, her eyes wide with wonder.

"Yes—in quest of the ghost."

"The room was dark."

"It pointed to his lamp on the bookshelf. 'I blow it out when I heard you coming, thinking I was going to encounter the specter.'

"You didn't know, did you, that you would—would find me here tonight?"

Again that note of wistfulness with which he was beginning to grow familiar.

"No more, expected it than I expected to meet the dear of Russia."

She appeared so disappointed to hear it that he hastened to add, "It's the most delightful surprise I ever had in my life."

She beamed upon him frankly. "You are pleased?" Evidently she wanted him to repeat it.

"To say I am 'pleased' would be false, I am overjoyed."

"Why?"

"It was much entertained at her venturing to put him through a catechism. 'How can you ask when for four days you have made it impossible for me to have three minutes' talk with you?'"

"You have wanted to talk with me?" Her eyes were not mournful now, but luminous with happiness.

"Haven't you wanted to talk to me?" he inquired.

"Oh!" she breathed as though her feelings were too deep for utterance.

"Being a mere man, he found himself quite unable to interpret her."

"Much good it does me to want to talk to you," he said ruefully, "when I have to search you out in a haunted room at midnight in order to do it."

"Why do you make it so difficult?"

"I have not meant to make it difficult. Oh, no, indeed. But you know I am kept very closely at work."

"I know. But why haven't you come out to me in the evenings—to the spring house or to the terrace by the gate?"

"I think," she said, her color deepening and her eyes falling, "it wouldn't have been—mildly."

"Well, then, at least you might be about somewhere where I could come to you."

"Also keeps a jealous watch upon me," she said without looking up.

"About to be hanged?"

"And then," she added, her head shaking a little lower, "I would not wish to intrude myself upon all your mind must be occupied with—with the girl you said you loved."

"What?" she asked, puzzled. "Oh, you refer to the stately Georgianna?" He laughed. "Georgianna also be—blessed, I should say. I tell you, Eunice, the one and only thing I have desired since I met talked with you has been to go on with that talk."

"Let us go on with it now," she said, a deep contentment radiating from her at his words.

"All right." He relaxed and leaned back more comfortably in his own chair, resting his forehead on his fingers and looking at her complacently satisfied as she did.

"That first," she said thoughtfully, "I would ask a promise of you."

"Yes, Eunice."

"Will you not betray to Mr. or Mrs. Morningstar that you saw me here?"

"Why don't you wish them to know?" he asked, feeling his complacency disturbed by her apparent cowardice.

"They would be very angry."

"Why need you care for that?"

"But they would stop my coming in the future. I have kept them from knowing these many years."

"These many years? You have been in the habit of coming to this room?"

"Every night for many years."

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "Then you are the ghost? The flickering light seen at the windows by passersby is your candle?"

"Yes."

"What did you come for?"

"To read."

"No not upright in his chair. 'For many years you have been reading the books in this room?'"

"Yes."

He stared at her for an instant spellbound with astonishment. Then he sank back in his chair, sitting together the tips of his fingers, a habit of his when trying to think things out.

"I see," he said slowly. "I see." He asked her a question abruptly. "Why would the Morningstars stop it if they knew?"

"They would think it made me less strong to work for them—staying up at night. You will not tell them?" she repeated anxiously.

"Of course I shall not tell that goes without saying, child. But," he asked curiously, "were you never afraid to come here—knowing the place was haunted?"

"I had great fear. But my longing to read the books was even greater."

"Your refusal to tell me the other evening how you came by the few books you had read—you were afraid I might betray you?"

"Always the great dread has been upon me, of having this only pleasant thing in my life taken away from me. It has made me cautious. But I would trust you now," she said with a restrained eagerness, "with any secret I had—I would trust you to the utmost."

"Thank you, Eunice," he answered gravely, an odd feeling of pleasure stirring in his heart.

He drew himself up and leaned toward the bookcase, examining in the light of his new knowledge their titles.

"So then it has been your secret reading that has made of you such an anomaly in the midst of these Morningstars. Living among them, but never of them, your real life has been spent in the world of fiction and history and poetry. Yes," he nodded, "I begin to see daylight now."

As a psychologist he felt an almost exciting interest in her as a case to be studied, with her peculiar mental equipment of a really extensive knowledge of literature, combined with an absolute ignorance of actual life, and the affectional and emotional side of her nature left utterly dormant.

"Will you tell me," she thought, "whether you have been told the story of this room? I know there is a story connected with it, but it has always been kept from me."

Although Eunice held it to be an old story, she felt that a girl should be guarded from all knowledge of evil, yet he had an instinctive aversion, in pouring into the ears of this childlike maiden the story of the crime, which Mrs. Morningstar had related to him.

On second thoughts, however, why should he hesitate when she had nerves steady enough to meet a ghost and a will so firm that, in all these years she had kept the secret of her surreptitious reading, unconsciously educating herself thereby possibly far beyond what many a girl gained from a systematic schooling? Surely the girl had "race" back of her, with her courage to face a ghost, her love of books so strong as to overcome obstacles that would have daunted any ordinary character and her native refinement of thought and instinct which he felt in her presence so keenly.

But he thought of him of another reason why he did not wish to repeat to her at once Mrs. Morningstar's tale. There was the paper he had thrust into his pocket at the sound of her step in the hall bearing that "confession." Until he had read that he would rather tell her nothing.

"Will you wait," he begged her, "and let me think it over first before I tell you what I know? Believe me," he added as he saw her look of disappointment, "that I hold your welfare sacred and that in asking you to wait I do what seems to me to be for your good."

He was surprised at the glow which irradiated her countenance at his words. She was so unused to being considered, he reflected, that a mere tone of kindness called forth all the latent brightness of her soul. Little did he dream how his words rang in her ears, "I hold your welfare sacred," and that the music of the spheres could not have seemed to her more wonderful in application of the fact, that since that night on the terrace, her heart had been heavy with the knowledge that he loved Georgianna.

"I will wait," she said, an unwonted thrill in her voice that held him with its spell, "until you are ready to tell me."

A disturbing possibility had suddenly occurred to him. Surely if that "confession" amounted to anything, Eunice would herself have found it out. He had supposed that he had come upon a discovery, and he felt a pang of the disappointment as he realized the probability of his having been mistaken.

"Those books on the top shelf, those Bibles," he suddenly said, "they were the only books I found dusty. Ah, of course," he added, "you don't read French, do you?"

Then perhaps, after all, she had never seen this paper in his breast pocket—extraordinary, indeed, if during all these years the secret of her history should have been within her reach and yet escaped her. A desire came to him to take it out and read it with her, but he thought better of it.

"You know nothing really of your self—your name, your origin, your life before you were left here with the Morningstars?"

A nervous droop to her lips as she shook her head was her answer. After a moment she looked up at him, her eyes, almost, solemn as she spoke.

"You say, it is for my good that you withhold for the time what you know of this room. It is, then, as I have often suspected, bound up in some way with my life?"

He hesitated an instant. "Let us not speak of it just yet, Eunice."

"Very well," she acquiesced gently. "I have so often wished," she added, "that I might know things that can really take me out of the lives of the people, that use them and afterward give out those impressions, this place would speak to me of its history."

It was not to be wondered at that her ideas were thus fantastic, he thought. The effect of her seclusion upon one who lived a life as isolated from the world as a nun's and whose mind was left uncluttered by any other mental exercise was so curious as to be almost phenomenal.

"But do you know how soon you can tell me?" she asked.

"Probably the next time we can be alone together. And don't let it be a week from now. When and where shall it be?"

"In this room tomorrow night?" she suggested.

"Can't you come to me on the terrace again?" he proposed, quite unwilling to expose her to the scandal which must arise if they were found alone in this chamber in the small hours of the night.

"We would not be interrupted or in any way disturbed here," she said, her clear eyes so innocent of any impropriety in her proposal that he would no more have suggested it to her than he would have offered poison to a babe.

"You know," she added, "they all have great fear of this part of the house. On the terrace we might be seen. Ah!"

She stopped short as though to ward off an anathema upon Alice.

But Eunice realized that perhaps she was right. They ran little or no risk of interruption in this room.

"Let us meet here, then, tomorrow night, and I will tell you what I can."

He was conscious of the fact that in the course of their talk she had seemed to him like one roused out of a long torpor, like a drooping wild flower reviving under a soft rain.

"Do you know, Eunice, it isn't true—what you told me the other night—that you have no education? You have read and, I have reason to believe, assimilated the best of English letters."

"You call me educated?" she asked, with interest.

"Technically an educated person is no doubt one who knows the multiplication tables. I am not sure that you do."

She shook her head sadly. "No," she humbly acknowledged. "And I can't spell either."

"Your education is dreadfully old-fashioned," he said, smiling. "But take comfort. This is the day for specialists. I believe that your knowledge of English is at least rather thorough."

"Would it serve me in supporting myself?" she eagerly asked.

"Surely. The wonder to me is that you have not through some occult process learned to read those Bibles."

She looked at him doubtfully.

"You never even glanced into them?"

"Long ago I used to take one down occasionally and with I could read it."

Had it been fortunate or unfortunate for her, he wondered, that she had missed this "confession" in his pocket? That remained to be seen, and he was eager to be alone in his room to read it. He felt a reluctance to bringing this interesting tale to an end, but he must without delay be alone to read the secret in his pocket. He rose from his chair.

"It's getting awfully late, Eunice. I'd better go now. We will meet here tomorrow night then. At what time?"

"I can come as soon as Ollie falls asleep. She was restless tonight, and it made me late. She is usually quiet by half past 8 at the latest."

"I shall be waiting for you here at that time. And now I think you'd better get some rest and not stop here to read."

He held out his hand to her. "Good night."

Without rising from the bed she laid her slim fingers in his, and he clasped them for an instant as he looked down into her eyes upturned to his. There was something in her passionate gaze, "pure as very fire," which set his own pulses to bounding and which made him feel for the first time in his presence the full force of a fascinating personality, the charm of a most sweet womanhood.

He clasped her hand almost fiercely, then turned away abruptly and went from the room.

While partridge shooting a sportsman suddenly had hundreds of wasps settle upon him. They crawled upon his hands and face, but he kept his nerve and did not interfere with them. The wasps scared the sportsman's friends, and they got some distance away, being afraid to go near him. After about ten minutes the wasps flew off in a body without having stung him.

GOVERNORS ASKED TO MEET NEXT MAY

PRESIDENT ANNOUNCES CONVENTION ON RESOURCES.

WILL INVITE CONGRESS

His Letter Sets Forth Urgent Need of Conserving the Natural Wealth of the Country.

Washington, Nov. 18.—President Roosevelt has invited the governors of the states and territories, to meet him at the White House May 13, 14 and 15 next, to discuss the question of means to conserve the natural resources of the country. Invitations are to be extended to the members of both houses of congress, and to the inland waterways commission.

The importance and manner in which the subject is to be considered are indicated in the president's letter to the governors, which was made public at the White House Sunday. The letter says:

"The natural resources of the territory of the United States were, at the time of settlement, richer, more varied and more available than those of any equal area on the surface of the earth. The development of these resources has given us, for more than a century, a rate of increase of population and wealth undreamed of by the men who founded our government and without parallel in history. It is obvious that the prosperity which we now enjoy rests directly upon these resources. It is equally obvious that the vigor and success which we desire and foresee for this nation in the future must have this as its ultimate material basis."

Must Not Forget the Future.

"In view of these evident facts, it seems to me time for the country to take account of its natural resources, and to inquire how, long they are likely to last. We are prosperous now; we should not forget that it will be just as important to our descendants to be prosperous in their time as it is to us to be prosperous in our time."

"Recently, I expressed the opinion that there is no other question now before the nation of equal gravity with the question of the conservation of our natural resources; and I added that it is the plain duty of those of us who for the moment are responsible, to make inventory of the natural resources, which have been handed down to us, to forecast as well as we may the needs of the future and so to handle the great sources of our prosperity as not to destroy in advance all hope of the prosperity of our descendants."

Resources Becoming Depleted.

"It is evident that the abundant natural resources, on which the welfare of this nation rests, are becoming depleted and, in not a few cases, are already exhausted. This is true of all portions of the United States; it is especially true of the longer-settled communities of the east. The gravity of the situation must, I believe, appeal with special force to the governors of the states, because of their close relations to the people and their responsibility for the welfare of their communities. I have therefore decided, in accordance with the suggestion of the inland waterways commission, to ask the governors of the states and territories to meet at the White House on May 13, 14 and 15, to confer with the president and with each other upon the conservation of natural resources."

"It gives me great pleasure to invite you to take part in this conference. I should be glad to have you select three citizens to accompany you and to attend the conference as your assistants and advisors. I shall also invite the senators and representatives of the sixtieth congress to be present at the sessions, so far as their duties will permit."

Conditions to Be Stated.

"In order to avoid discussion, I shall invite a few recognized authorities to present brief descriptions of actual facts and conditions, without argument, leaving the conference to deal with each topic as it may elect. The members of the inland waterways commission will be present, in order to share with us the benefit of information and suggestion and, if desired, to set forth their provisional plans and conclusions."

Facts, which I cannot gain say, force me to believe that the conservation of our natural resources is the most weighty question now before the people of the United States. If this is so, the proposed conference, which is the first of its kind, will be among the most important gatherings in our history in its effect upon the welfare of all our people."

Bruno Puelia, 22 years old, of Yonkers, fell dead with a bullet in the head. Parlo Lagenda, about the same age, received a bullet in the side, another in the leg and, as he fled, a third in the back, which killed him. King surrendered to the police.

BLOOD POISON HUMILIATING-VILE-DESTRUCTIVE

The first symptom of Contagious Blood Poison is usually a little sore or ulcer, which is quickly followed by a red rash on the skin, swollen glands in the groin, falling hair, ulcerated mouth and throat, and often copper colored blotches on different parts of the body. As the blood becomes more fully contaminated with the poison, pustular eruptions and sores break out on the flesh, and in extreme cases the nerves and bones are attacked and the finger nails drop off. Then the sufferer finds themselves diseased from head to foot with this humiliating, vile and destructive poison. No other disease is so highly contagious; many an innocent person has been inoculated by handling the clothing or using the toilet articles of an infected person. There is but one certain, reliable cure for Contagious Blood Poison, and that is S. S. S. It attacks the disease in the right way by going down into the circulation and neutralizing and forcing out every particle of the poison. It makes the blood pure and rich, tones up the system, and completely and permanently cures this disease. S. S. S. has cured thousands of cases of Contagious Blood Poison. A GRAIN OF SENSE

By Robert Carlton Brown

Bobbs was bashful. Bobbs was a bachelor. He had loved Mary for three years, but what good did that do Bobbs, and what good did it do Mary? Yes—Bobbs was bashful. In her presence he acted like a first offender before a judge.

He was not a pretty thing, neither was he clever, but he was a man. The neighbors said that Mary loved him. Maybe Mary would have said so, too, but Bobbs never gave her the chance.

Somewhere, quite unwittingly sent Bobbs a sample copy of a friends journal. In scrutinizing the advertisements he came suddenly upon a startling one:

"HOW TO WIN HER LOVE."

"It's new, boys. I haven't even hit Paris yet. The best thing in the world. Teaches you how to overcome bashfulness, how to act in the company of ladies, and how to jolly the girls. It costs 10 cents, and the first smile will repay you. Send that dime to-day to the Honanza Company."

There was something imperative about "Send that dime to-day." Bobbs always had taken orders, and this one, as the rest, he accepted meekly.

Time hung heavily on Bobbs' hands until the book came. When it did, he seized it greedily, rushed to his room, locked the door, pulled down the blind and read the whole six pages at one sitting.

Having finished, he got weakly to his feet, crossed to the cracked mirror on the opposite wall, and smiled into it sickly.

"Greet her with a smile," he repeated. "Then say, 'You're lookin' swell to-night.' Flatter her, treat her like you would the queen of England. Use lots of soft soap; they like the lather. Be agreeable. Honor her; jolly her; never be obdurate; give in to her every whim. One—but that's some job they set before a fellow, but I guess I can do it all right."

He put the book in his pocket and went that night to call upon Mary, after an hour's rigid rehearsing.

She looked blankly at him as he entered the house with a wax figure grin, and remarked, "Gee—you're lookin' swell to-night, Mary. That gingham's a beauty."

He didn't once mention the weather in the course of half an hour's conversation, and Mary began to look worried.

"Has he been drinking?" her mind suddenly suggested. Continually she puzzled, while he made frantic attempts to entertain her with a few jokes selected from the book.

"What on earth is the matter with him?" she gasped to herself.

At last she decided that he must be sick and it had affected his head. Carefully she broached the subject. She said he was sick, he admitted it, for the book had instructed, "Agree to everything she says."

Finally, after more absurdities and foolish grinnings, Mary jumped up with a frightened look, grasped him by the hand, and cried, "Come, John, I'll take you to the doctor's, you must come, there is something dreadful the matter with you."

For a moment he hesitated, he was just on the point of going—then—suddenly—he awoke and immediately became quite natural.

"There's nothing the matter with me," he growled.

Her lower lip quivered, he certainly was strange to-night; she could not understand it; she must get him to the doctor.

"Well—well, if you're all right, what—what on earth are you acting so foolish for to-night?" she pleaded.

He hung his head shamefacedly and thought. Things were not going just as the book had planned; he was losing ground.

Suddenly he jumped up, seized her by the hands, and shouted, "There's nothing the matter with me, only—only—I love you, Mary."

"Oh, John, has it gone to your head like that?" she cried, permitting herself to be hugged.

"No," he answered, as soon as he felt like using his lips in a purely practical way. "No—it's this confounded book."

He pulled the pamphlet from his pocket and threw it savagely into the waste basket.

"The book said I was to act that way to win you," he continued, holding her to him so that she could not see him blush, "but the book wasn't right. I've won you another way, and I tell you it just all goes to prove what I've always said."

"What's that, John?" Mary cooed, now that she was relieved of her anxiety.

"It just goes to prove," emphasized Bobbs, "that a grain of common sense is worth a pound of book learning."

Real "Sparkling."

The big green automobile stood motionless in the sandy road.

"Where is your father?" asked the young man, peering around in the darkness.

"Under the machine looking for the 'sparkling,'" whispered the pretty girl. The young man laughed softly and slipped his arm around her.

"Poor old gentleman!" he chuckled. "The idea of looking for 'sparkling' under the auto when it is going on up here."

And then he intentionally fouled some of the mechanism and kept the perspiring old gentleman under the big car for over an hour.

TAFT IS AT VLADIVOSTOK

SECRETARY GREETED THERE BY OFFICERS OF THE CZAR.

Starts for St. Petersburg Tuesday and Will Sail from Hamburg Without Visiting Emperor William.

Vladivostok, Nov. 18.—Secretary Taft arrived here at noon Sunday on board the converted cruiser Rainbow. The Rainbow was conveyed by the cruisers Chattanooga and Galveston.

When the American vessels entered the Golden Horn they were met by the Russian gunboat deformed to escort them up the harbor. Salutes were exchanged with the land batteries. As the Rainbow steamed in there could be seen the wreck of the Russian torpedo boat destroyer which was sunk during the recent naval mutiny.

The Rainbow anchored off shore, guarded by the Chattanooga and the Galveston. The secretary and his party will remain on board their steamer until their departure from Vladivostok over the trans-Siberian railroad for St. Petersburg at seven o'clock on the morning of November 19. An imperial car has been placed at Mr. Taft's disposal for this journey and the emperor of Russia has detailed military and naval aids to accompany him.

Gen. Peluga, the commandant of this port, and other naval, military and civil officials called upon Mr. Taft Sunday afternoon. It is probable that from St. Petersburg Mr. Taft will journey direct to Hamburg and sail for New York on December 7 on board the steamer President Grant.

Berlin, Nov. 18.—Secretary Taft has definitely and finally decided not to visit Emperor William. He sent a telegram to Chancellery Tower, the American ambassador to Germany, two days ago, expressing his regret that he would not be able to see the emperor in England. To this Mr. Tower replied by a message in which he pointed out certain considerations which might lead Secretary Taft to change his plans. A second telegram has now been received from the secretary in which he reaffirms that he is obliged to proceed directly to America and requests Mr. Tower to transmit to his majesty his very deep regret. Mr. Taft will take a steamer at Hamburg early in December.

Paris, Nov. 18.—Officials of the government learned with the greatest regret Sunday that Secretary Taft is not likely to visit France on his way home, as they had planned to extend to him many honors.
